To Whom it May Concern:

Michael Ferreira worked for me as a consultant in our internal Consulting Services Group for a couple of years. He was responsible for the execution of small projects from start to finish, including the requirements gathering, design, coding, testing and implementation. These systems were written in Clipper and Visual Basic, and some involved Web front-ends.

I always found Michael to be very client-focused and during his tenure in my group he received several awards for superior client service from his user community. He took a lot of care to ensure that his systems were built for flexibility and maintainability, within the time-to-market constraints of the business units.

Michael always expressed a keen thirst for knowledge and was known as the Web guru in the group. He also has a very good knowledge of business issues and processes to complement his technical expertise. He would be an asset to any project.

Yours truly
